ODD-ONE-OUT  111-120
The little Princess walked up and down the terrace with her companions, and played hide and seek round the stone vases and the old moss-grown statues. On ordinary days, she was only allowed to play with children of her own rank, so she always had to play alone, but her birthday was an exception, and the King had given orders that she was to invite any of her young friends whom she liked to come and amuse themselves with her. She felt the burden of being a princess every day because being a princess meant being alone. So her birthday was the only day on which she enjoyed real happiness.

Historically, Korean families were formed into clans that shared the same family name. As a result, only a few hundred major surnames are used today. Kim, the most common, is the surname of about one fifth of all Korean families. In Korea, family names are customarily placed first and women do not change their names when they marry. A first son is especially welcomed because his arrival ensures the continuity of the family line. On its first birthday, a baby usually has a big party at which he or she is formally introduced to the family and their friends. As children grow up, they are taught to behave properly and to respect and obey their elders.

Thieves who stole more than £80,000 of jewels and necklaces from a house in Liverpool while the owners' 16-year-old son was having a birthday party, discarded some of them on some nearby wasteland, detectives said yesterday. Officers, who returned the recovered items, said an armed gang burst into the property in Tuebrook, Liverpool, at 11pm when the teenager was in the house with six friends as his parents continued their holiday in France. The gang locked the 16-year-old in a room while they robbed the house. The party guests were forced out of the building at knifepoint. Merseyside police returned some of the antique jewellery pieces to the boy's mother, who cut short her two-week summer holiday with her husband because of the burglary. The thieves also caused thousands of pounds worth of damage to the semi-detached home. A spokeswoman for Merseyside police urged anyone who might have found the gems (jewels) to hand them back.

B) became the head of the family and replaced men
C) started commerce and gained economic power
D) could live without men's support
E) refused to leave their families and fight

During the Civil War between the States women played a number of roles. Women from the North and the South organised themselves at home to provide much needed support for their fathers, brothers, husbands and sons far from home in the field. Local Ladies Aid Societies knitted socks, rolled bandages, sewed clothing, sent bedding and towels and food. They wrote letters, kept the family farm or local store going, and held the family together as news from the front line slowly arrived. Some women, not content to stay at home, disguised themselves as men and joined in both the Union and Confederate armies. Of the 400 or so known women who joined and served in the ranks, many were not found out until they were wounded or became ill or were killed in battle. Some women served as spies, trading vital military information or taking messages across enemy lines.

It is clear from the passage that when the Civil War started, women ----.

A) stayed at home and knitted socks for themselves
B) came together and prepared materials to meet the men's needs during the war
C) organised themselves at home and cooked food to sell

One day he looked to the Sky world and decided that Sun and Moon were not smarter than he. "It's a pretty easy job lighting the world," he said. "I must go up and visit them for I want an easy job like lighting the world." Now you might think it was hard to get to the Sky world, but actually it was very easy. Mink waited for one of those days, that those who live in the Pacific Northwest know so well, when the clouds were brushing the treetops and the rain drops down. He climbed a tall cedar tree, all the way to the top, and found himself in the Sky world.
