Satire is a literary technique employed in various types of media to express criticism of an idea, person, or social group in a clever and usually humorous manner. A satire generally has a specific target, which the writer holds up to ridicule in the hopes that the offending target will be exposed to the general populace, altered, or abolished. This is often done by having the satire's narrator hold the target up for approval in such a way that the perceptive reader can perceive all the faults the author wishes him or her to perceive in the target. Satires can be broadly divided into Horatian satire, which takes a light and humorous approach to its target, and Juvenalian satire, which is far more angry and bitter towards its intended targets. Both types are named after well-known satirists of ancient Rome.

29. According to the passage, satire frequently expresses criticism of its target by ----.

- A) comparing it to ancient Rome
- B) proposing and arguing for something new
- C) showing the reader the many virtues of the target
- D) savagely attacking the target
- E) showing approval while subtly demonstrating the faults of the target

30. How are the two types of satire distinguishable from each other?

- A) By the number of targets satirized
- B) By the type of media the satire appears in
- C) By whether the satire is broad or narrow in its choice of targets
- D) By whether the criticism is delivered mildly or harshly
- E) By whether or not humour is used in the satire

31. What does the passage mainly focus on?

- A) The different varieties of satire
- B) The targets chosen by satirists
- C) The nature of satire
- D) Famous satirists from ancient Rome
- E) How to use satire to encourage social change

The Ramada hotel chain was founded in 1954 by Chicago businessmen Marion W. Isbel and a group of investors. Isbel devised the idea of building and operating a chain of roadside motor hotels while he was on a cross-country trip with his wife, Ingrid, and their three children. On that trip, Isbell noted the substandard quality of roadside motor courts along US highways at the time. He saw the possibility in the developing market for a chain of roadside motor hotels conveniently located along major highways which would provide lodgings with hotel-like quality at near-motel rates. In addition to higher-quality establishments, Ramada hotels featured additional amenities such as TV, air-conditioning, and on-site restaurants. The name "Ramada" is derived from the Spanish word for "shady resting place."

32. According to the passage, while travelling with his family, Marion W. Isbel noticed ----.

- A) the high quality of roadside inns in the US
- B) that there were not enough hotels near US highways
- C) the hotel he was staying in did not have a restaurant
- D) he could buy the hotel he was staying in and turn it into a chain
- E) roadside hotels in the US were of generally poor quality

33. According to Isbel, why would people stay at his hotels?

- A) Due to the fact that they had televisions in them
- B) Because they had a better name than their competitors
- C) Inasmuch as they were cheaper than existing roadside inns
- D) Because they were of higher quality than most inns but still reasonably priced
- E) As wealthy travellers were tired of poor quality hotels

34. It is understood from the passage that Ramada hotels ----.

- A) offer amenities as well as good quality
- B) are very much like standard motels
- C) are not very popular in the USA
- D) have not managed to take their popularity to Europe
- E) are very scarce in the USA

The golden age of arcades began around 1979 and continued until the mid-90s. During this time, entire venues were given over to video game arcades, which became extremely popular, especially in the United States and Japan. Teenage males were the main customers of such establishments, and by the mid-1980s, arcades had become so popular that the typical teenager might pass one or even two on his way back from school. Such was the popularity of arcades that figures from famous games such as Pac-Man and the Super Mario Brothers entered popular culture. However, the popularity of arcades declined in the 1990s, as home console systems such as Nintendo and Play-Station developed technology superior to that found in arcade games. Eventually, most of the arcades either closed down or altered their product to appeal more to families with children.

35. According to the passage, the popularity of arcade games was so great that ----.

- A) they began to influence the culture as a whole
- B) families with children soon wanted to play them as well
- C) teenage males became respected members of the community
- D) technological development was stalled
- E) arcades began to be placed in schools

36. Why did arcade games lose popularity according to the passage?

- A) Because arcade owners decided to pursue a different market
- B) Inasmuch as video game characters lost favour in popular culture
- C) As arcades could not keep up with home consoles technologically
- D) Because home console systems had more popular characters
- E) Due to the fact that home console systems were cheaper

37. What does the passage in general describe?

- A) Technological developments in video games
- B) Popular reaction to arcade games
- C) Famous arcade games of the 1980s
- D) Why arcades were popular with teenage males
- E) The rise and subsequent fall of arcade games

The Tiger Shark is an aggressive and indiscriminate feeder, and is known to eat virtually anything that comes across its path. For this reason, the species is sometimes referred to as the garbage can of the sea. The shark's normal diet consists of birds, fish, squid, sea turtles, and smaller sharks but examinations of the contents of tiger shark stomachs has revealed such bizarre items as automobile license plates, petroleum cans, tires, and baseballs. The shark has very acute senses, which aid it in hunting in the often murky waters where it is generally found. Because of its sharp senses, the shark may feel confident attacking prey even without a clear idea of what the prey is. Once the shark has found prey, it often encircles the prey as a means of studying it before attacking.

38. Why are tiger sharks are sometimes called the garbage can of the sea?

- A) Owing to the fact that they feed in dirty, trash-filled water
- B) Since they remove unwanted animals such as squids
- C) Inasmuch as their acute senses help them to detect garbage
- D) Because they are not picky in choosing what to eat
- E) Due to the fact that they eat the garbage of other fish

39. What could be the best title for the passage?

- A) Tiger sharks and their stomachs.
- B) Tigers of Northwest Atlantic
- C) How Tiger Sharks Adapt the Ecosystem
- D) Throwing Unwanted Petrol Cans into Oceans
- E) What's in a Tiger Shark's Stomach?

40. It can be discovered from the passage that the tiger shark ----.

- A) attacks its prey the moment that it sees it
- B) watches its prey before attacking it
- C) is not an aggressive animal
- D) looks for its prey in many different places
- E) does not like eating many various things
